

Mendez, Ernesto
Professor Hettich
December 4, 2008

The Sea Turtle Journey

As the sun is swallowed by the blue waters
And civilization comes to a rest
From the water emerges an unlikely hero
Whose journey has led her here to the beach
A journey of three thousand miles, 3 encounters with death, and an unforgiving sea
She makes this journey once a year
Faithful and devoted to her cause
As she struggles to walk and water is turned into jagged sand
She pushes forth and comes to a stop
Here she will uncover the earth
For feet upon feet of sand is shoveled aside
Until finally she comes to a rest
As she takes each breath, eight new lives are brought into the earth
Covered with in white silk stronger than steel
Now two hundred new lives later, the hero begins to walk
And once again covers her treasures with the earth
Exhausted and weary the reflection of the ocean one mile away is bright in her eyes.
And as the sun begins to break from the chains of the blue seas
Our unlikely hero is gone without a trace.